- systems analysis - cite Franklin Covey - "Organizations are perfectly aligned to get the results they get,"
- What is introduced by human kind through our choices, our inherent "state of affairs" is not necessarily to be simply accepted. This is in large part because our "state of affairs" is malleable. We are, collectively, architects of reality.
- If I accept this reality, the current "state of human affairs", even though I do not embrace it, then I passively reinforce it. If I do not become part of (instrumental in) the solution ("course correction"), then I remain part of the problem ("Status Quo"). This is why, when I hear a statement like, "To be practical, you must accept this reality" I strongly disagree. It is truer said that the "current state of human affairs" is what we choose "as" our reality. Truer in the sense that it assigns responsibility and accountability. The introduced portion of reality is what we choose it to be. Due Portion
